

The CLLS Employment Law Committee presents
“Ambiguous Proposition”
a Play & Panel Event

Tuesday 7 July 2026 | 18:00-20:30

Hosted by Herbert Smith Freehills Kramer

Introduced by Samantha Brown, Managing Partner, Employment, Pensions and Incentives, UK and EMEA

A different kind of legal event...

The City of London Law Society (CLLS) is bringing the City together for a flagship Employment Law Committee event that does something different.

This is part of our wider strategy to elevate and amplify the role of City lawyers and HR leaders - convening thoughtful, balanced conversations on complex, real-world issues that sit at the intersection of law, people and culture.

The Play: “Ambiguous Proposition”

Ambiguous Proposition is a powerful, thought-provoking one-woman play written by Shona

Newmark and performed by Hilary Cordery.

The play explores the impact of an allegation of sexual harassment on a young man and his family, asking difficult questions about truth, perception, power and consequence.

Told through the perspective of the accused’s mother, it challenges audiences to reflect on where they stand in situations that are rarely black and white.

Panel Discussion...

The performance will be followed by a panel discussion featuring leading City practitioners:

Chair: Emma Williams, Chair, LawCare

Joined by:

Andrew Taggart, Partner, Herbert Smith Freehills Kramer

Colin Leckey, Partner, Lewis Silkin and member the CLLS Employment Law Committee

Florence Brocklesbury, Founder, Bellevue Law

Hilary Cordery, Actor

Shona Newmark, Playwright

We are proud that this event supports:

Shona Newmark and Hilary Cordery have generously agreed that their performance fee will be donated to LawCare.

Places are limited

CLLS corporate member firms: up to two places per firm
Encouraged to bring a senior HR, employment or in-house legal client

Tickets: Members: No charge

Non-members: £100 donation to LawCare

To book, contact: Liz.Thomas@clls.org